Dear Sir/Madam:

Please do not consider taking over the retirement accounts and 401(k)'s of hard working Americans! With 13 trillion dollars in debt and a social security system in collapse, I see no reason to give the government control of any finances, let alone some of the most important to families across the country.

It seems to me that this would be outright property theft, and I would hope with every fiber of my being that if something like this passed, it would be challenged and overturned in court.

I would rather forgo retirement all together, than give it to the government to "manage".

Please consider the families across the United States who rely on their retirement. Do not try to manage their money! They can do it for themselves (or pay someone to do so) as they are perfectly capable. And they must know how to do it themselves! There are certain survival skills (including surviving after retirement) that people must develop. And they never will if the government is always trying to "take over" for people so they don't have to worry about thinking it through. We are human beings with brains, please let us use them! If anything, think of adding "Retirement Savings" curriculum into the public schools!

In closing, I ask that you please, please, please do NOT consider managing my retirement account!

Sincerely,

Amanda Teresi
